

The efficiency of operation in the higher education is strongly influenced by the support of direct communication methods and collaboration internally and and beyond organisational units.

The productivity of employees (how and which channels are they using for information exchange) is getting more and more strategic issue.

Based on global experiences we can state that several internal IT-service (file-shares, email systems, intranet) give platform to the internal and inter-institutional communication, however, the use of these systems are not always optimal, because real time collaboration, application sharing, ad-hoc meeting spaces are not, or only partially supported.

Our vision is to provide a communication platform based on existing infrastructure, which enables users to easily get in touch with all the opportunities which will certainly enforce institutions' efficiency.

We will introduce Office Live Communication Server 2005 from this prospective.